A little bit of a time waster Have you ever searched for a website and found that it is not opening? This can happen for various reasons, like the server has been overloaded or the internet connection is slow or the website is being hosted by a different server or the cache is not being used. And this can cause the website not to open, making the user to restart the browser. However, it does not have to be this way. This is because a website can be made to open even in cases where it is not fully loaded. For this to happen, there is a process named "phantomjs" that can be used. Phantomjs is a free open source web browser that will make sure that the user can actually see the webpage in its full glory. It does not need a web browser and it is compatible with all kinds of web pages It works as an "HTTP" proxy so all the requests are handled by this program instead of the "HTTP" server. In case you have installed any add-ons in your web browser, you can use the "phantomjs" software to turn it into a proxy. This is an important advantage of the software, as it lets you see the webpage without waiting for the browser to load it. It is compatible with all browsers like Firefox, Chrome, Safari, etc. If you need to view web pages such as web forms, use this software. Useful for pre-designed forms on websites If you often encounter web forms that you have to fill out and that may not be properly formatted, then you should consider using this software. It can be used as a stop-gap solution for users who want to see how the form appears in real time before submitting it. 2edc1e01e8
